Lawyers representing McNamee and his estranged wife, meanwhile, urged Walton in papers filed with the court on Wednesday afternoon to quash a subpoena for the trainer's divorce records. One of McNamee's attorney, Richard Emery, said he learned on Friday that Clemens' attorneys want the documents delivered to the court on Monday. Eileen McNamee filed for divorce in New York state court in Queens.

Eileen McNamee's attorney Marc Rapaport said the defense subpoena should be quashed because New York law protects confidentiality in divorce matters and the couple's three children have "already suffered from the media's intrusive glare."
